

Rockingham County Renovation Project

Cost and space-availability issues have brought about an increased demand for renovation and restoration work in the healthcare sector. Brookstone Builders is well-experienced in this area, having developed both specialty skills and relationships with qualified sub-contractors.

One recent project involved putting the ten-year-old Driscoll building's third floor to practical use for the Rockingham County. The Driscoll building's third floor had been left totally unfinished, representing wasted space for the county. The completion of the interior construction now allows up to twenty-eight patients to make use of state-of-the-art living space with full nursing home services.
